Main topic and thematic units

The programme introduces Greek maritime heritage through museum visits and links historical seafaring with navigation, ship technology, maritime professions and contemporary shipping.

Educational objectives

Students understand the development and social importance of Greek seamanship, connect theoretical learning with authentic exhibits and develop observation, research, teamwork and presentation skills.

Implementation methodology

Museum-based and collaborative learning uses thematic stations, worksheets, digital tools, research assignments, model construction and guided reflection.

Duration and start

Sixteen weeks, with one one-hour meeting per week, beginning after the programme launch event.

Visits and partnerships

Planned visits include the Museum of Maritime Tradition in Perama, the Archaeological Museum of Piraeus and another maritime or cultural institution.

Links with the curriculum

The programme links Maritime Technology, Navigation, Maritime History, Professional Practice, safety, ship construction and maritime terminology.

Dissemination

A school exhibition, student constructions, photographs, research work, digital presentations and video will communicate the results.

Evaluation

Student feedback, participation observation, evaluation of projects and comparison of initial and final understanding will be used.

Timeline

Month 1: planning and thematic preparation. Month 2: organisation and student preparation. Months 3-4: visits, projects, presentation and evaluation.
